DESCRIPTION

713 Laguna Drive isn't your typical mid-century ranch—it's a home with personality, presence, and a story to tell. Tucked into the heart of Richardson Heights, this 1960-built, 1,957-square-foot property blends classic architecture with a rich, collected style that sets it apart from the ordinary. Vaulted ceilings soar across much of the home, creating a sense of openness you don't often find in homes of this era. Brick flooring in the living room adds warmth and texture, while wood floors throughout much of the home bring a timeless, grounded feel. The interior is anything but cookie-cutter. Inspired by Old World design and curated by an antique dealer, the home is filled with high-end antiques and artifacts that highlight its unique character. It's a space that feels layered, soulful, and ready for someone who appreciates a home with depth—or someone excited to reimagine it with their own vision. Step outside and the backyard becomes your private retreat. A beautiful Gunite pool with a water feature sets the scene for long Texas summers, weekend get-togethers, or quiet evenings under the trees. The generous lot offers both space and privacy—another hallmark of this established neighborhood. Location is where this home quietly overdelivers. Just minutes away, the Richardson Heights Shopping Center offers a mix of everyday convenience and local favorites, including Cane Rosso for some of the best pizza in DFW, and Jeng Chi Restaurant, a go-to spot known well beyond Richardson. For work and commuting, you're near the Telecom Corridor, with quick access to US-75 connecting you to Dallas. Nearby CityLine adds even more dining, shopping, and entertainment options, along with trails and green space. This is a home for someone who doesn't want "just another house." It's for someone who values character, space, and the opportunity to make something truly their own—all in one of Richardson's most established and evolving neighborhoods.
