DESCRIPTION

You know that feeling when you pull into Broken Bow? Windows down. Trees closing in overhead. Serene and untouched by municipal influence. Now imagine that — but you never left DFW. Sitting on 2.5 acres of the most heavily wooded, canopied land you'll find inside the metroplex, this home is something that simply doesn't come available in these parts. An enormous tiered deck spans the length of the house and hangs directly over a babbling creek. This is your backyard. Inside, a step-down living area framed by oversized windows and skylights immerses you in the tree line from every angle. The home doesn't compete with the outdoors — it invites it in. An updated kitchen delivers granite countertops, generous island and cabinet space, and room to spread out. The owner's suite features a slider that opens directly onto the rear deck, because even your morning routine should come with a view. The layout is intentional. Each room is its own space — defined, private, and purposeful. Upstairs, generously sized bedrooms flank a central game room, and an unfinished bonus room is ready to become whatever you need — an office, a gym, a fifth bedroom. From the spacious circle drive out front to the creek beneath the deck out back, every inch of this property is designed around one thing: drawing you outside. This isn't a home you commute back to. It's a home you escape to without ever leaving civilization. Rarely available. Impossible to replicate. Available now.
